The recent discovery of high-quality battery-grade graphite at the Kasiya project in Malawi has sparked excitement, not only for the country's economic prospects but also for the global battery industry. As the demand for sustainable energy storage solutions grows, graphite, a key component in lithium-ion batteries, has become a critical mineral.

According to Power Technology's parent company, GlobalData, global energy storage capacity is indeed set to reach the COP29 target of 1.5TW by 2030. Rich explains that pumped storage hydroelectricity (PSH) has been central to the energy transition, having contributed more than 90% of deployed global energy storage capacity until 2020.
